Inclusive Images

By Justin Dombecki

Abstract

The geographic inclusivity of images used to train most convolutional deep learning neural networks has, historically, been limited to North America and Europe. The Inclusive Images Kaggle project aims to use models trained with images in these exclusive continents to predict similar objects in images from other geographic locations.

The Open Image Dataset has been used as a benchmark for image classification. A human verified subset of this dataset will be used to train a neural network model. This competition would introduce images with two stages aimed at extending the geographic inclusivity of a trained model. The first stage provides a small fine tuning subset of the larger test dataset. Both stages require a prediction table against the test dataset of that stage. A score is calculated and posted on the competition website.

A secondary focus of the competition would be the creation of unique deep learning model architectures. A particular interest of the competition hosts is the process of generating various model architectures to solve the geographic inclusivity issue stated at the beginning. The top 5 entries would be invited to a workshop in Toronto with Google to discuss their model creation process and awarded $5000.

The competition was completed on November 12, 2018. The top 5 scores on the leaderboard were 0.39151, 0.37374, 0.37102, and 0.33184. Reviewing the discussion board and public kernals yielded that R-CNN or Regional Convolutional Neural Network was a popular architecture. Although the winner of the competition used large polling architectures to achieve 0.39151, they were also able to receive the fourth highest score with the PNASNet-5-Large model alone.

There are two tracks offered with the Inclusive Images Kaggle Competition: classification and localization. All of the image metadata needed to start these tasks are contained within train_bounding_boxes.csv.

Here are the training fields accessible through train_bounding_boxes.csv:

- ImageID
- Source
- LabelName
- Confidence
- XMin
- XMax
- YMin
- YMax
- IsOccluded
- IsTruncated
- IsGroupOf
- IsDepiction
- IsInside

This dataset contains 1,743,042 images with 513 gigabytes of information. With the mapping provided in train-annotations-bbox.csv, those images have 600 labels structured in a hierarchy with a maximum depth of 5 and containing 90 top-level labels.

The stage 1 test dataset will have 32,226 images with a geographic exclusivity to Africa and South and Southeastern Asia.

The stage 2 test dataset will have 65,535 images with a geographic exclusivity to South Asia, East Africa, and South America.

Approach

This is my first attempt at a Kaggle competition and, in fact, my first real world Deep Learning project. Therefore, I would like to take an approach that is iterative. I will start by only solving for the classification problem and ignore the localization. Then, I would focus on reducing the overall size of the training dataset and complexity of the label hierarchy to a comfortable level. An attempt to create a solution for this simplified version, which could be submitted to the competition, would be made. Once achieved, I would iteratively introduce more data and label complexity to the model. This would allow hyperparameter adjustments to the model at each iteration.

Given the time constraints and my aptitude, I will use pretrained 'imagenet' convolutional bases, VGG16 and DenseNet121. Although this is against the recommendation of the competition hosts to be considered for the workshop, this handicap should assist me in achieving a relatively good classification accuracy early and allow me to iterate toward more complexity.

Inspired by the secondary focus of the competition, I would like to experiment with model architectures, particularly the classification layers.

I would reduce the 600 labels to 13 top-level labels that have some visual distinction. These labels are:

- Home appliance
- Plumbing fixture
- Office supplies
- Furniture
- Building
- Musical instrument
- Sports equipment
- Tool
- Plant
- Vehicle
- Animal
- Person
- Food

First, using a small subset of the available training data, I will attempt to use the `ImageDataGenerator`, as was used for the course assignments. This will require organizing images into directories representing the labels.

This approach provides a single class and multiple label classification. However, because we'll find that many of the images have multiple labels, the single class approach 'confuses' the model with contradicting metrics. Subsequently, the training and validation accuracy are below 50%.

Rather than optimize the hyperparameters for the single class model, I chose to experiment with a multiple class model. Referencing the textbook, I discovered multiple output models (p. 240). The ability to use the functional API to output representations to multiple classifying layers is intriguing and seems powerful. It became clear that this approach could yield a path to performing the localization portion of this competition (by applying a regression head).

Two configurations for multiple head classifiers came to mind while reviewing this section. The first was to apply the heads after the pooling of a densely connected hidden layer, used to abstract the convolutional representations before activating the classification. Secondly, with so much potential training data available, a configuration with more trainable variables could be created by applying the heads right after the flattening of the convolutional base representations, creating 'dense classification heads'.

But first, the multiple output approach requires a different image generator than the one used in the single class classification. As an attempt to use the Keras fitting API with Pandas Dataframes became unproductive (see Appendix), I decided to create my own image and label generator to match a multiple head classifier, using mathematical induction.

Training using multiple class and multiple label classification will appear to yield much better results, even after very few epochs. However, research has shown that this approach is plagued by false negatives being backpropagated through the model. The remedy is to calculate a F1 (or F2) score to use as a metric during training.

In an effort to complete the competition, I attempt to fine tune the model with those mappings provided with stage 1. Also, I attempt to create a class predictor. I will start this effort by predicting classes on a single image.Then, I will form a generalized predicting generator. The resulting predictions submitted to the Kaggle competition.

Finally, I will attempt to scale the training data up to incorporate more of the 1,743,042 images.

Storage

With a dataset this large, storage management is priority. The full 561GB dataset will be stored on Google Cloud. For training runs, image sets will be transferred to Google Drive, which can be mounted to the Google Colab envirnoment and works well with data generators.

Key File

The key file is required to perform any commands on the data with `gcloud` or `gsutil`. This file will be store locally within this environment. So, it will need to be created each session when using a Virtual Machine.

In [0]:
```
!gcloud iam service-accounts keys create key-file.json --iam-account 'service-

com]

Intro to `gsutil`

Now, images can be copied from the Google Cloud storage to the local storage. For instance, these 3 validation images could be copied to a validation directory locally. Of course, when using a virtual machine, this is not a viable solution. Any images used for training, validation or testing would all need to be copied to the local storage of that VM each session. For large training sets, this could, in fact, be impossible.

Using Google Storage Client to transfer from Cloud to Drive

`gsutil` is a good tool.

However, we aren't able to use Python variables, as it is a command line tool. Instead, we can use the Google Cloud Storage Python API, mentioned earlier.

In [0]:
```
from google.cloud import storage
from google.auth import credentials, exceptions def download_blob(bucket_name, source_blob_name, destination_file_name, loggin g=False):

  storage_client = storage.Client(project=bucket_name)
  bucket = storage_client.get_bucket(bucket_name) blob = bucket.blob(source_blob_name)

  blob.download_to_filename(destination_file_name)

  if (logging):
    print('Blob {} downloaded to {}.'.format(source_blob_name, destination_fil e_name))
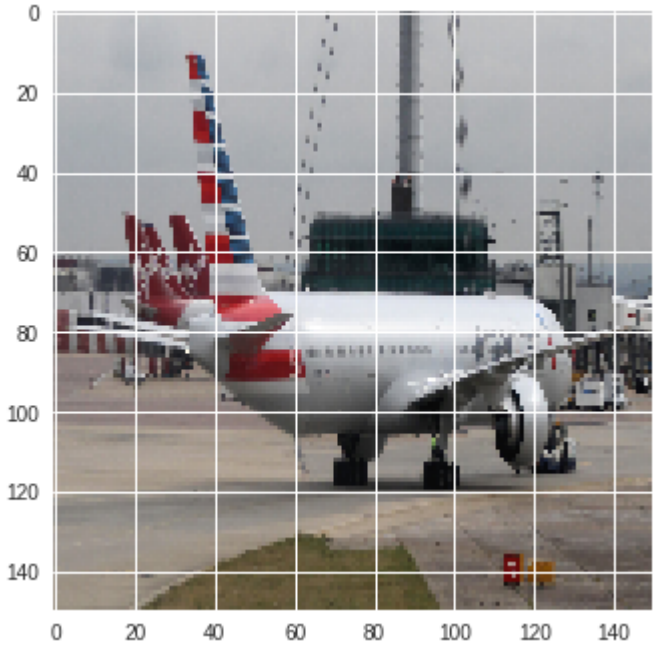
```

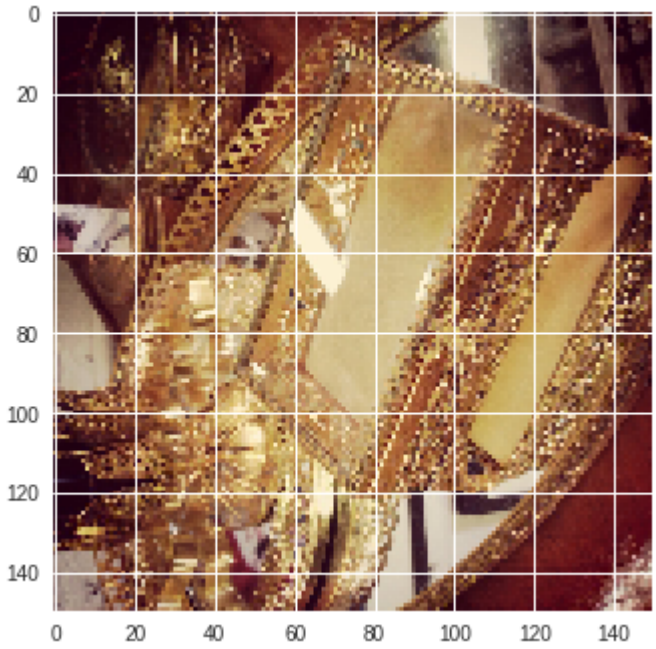
In [0]:
```
for image_path in validation_image_paths:
  download_blob('inclusive-images-221122',
                image_path,
                image_path)

displayImagesFromWorkspace(validation_image_paths, print_shape=True)
```

```
(1, 150, 150, 3)
```



```
(1, 150, 150, 3)
```



```
(1, 150, 150, 3)
```

Using the Google Cloud API to transfer to Drive

Similarly, we can use the Googld Cloud Python API to transfer images to Google Drive.

In [0]:
```
for image_path in validation_image_paths:
  download_blob('inclusive-images-221122',
                image_path,
                image_path)
```

In [0]:
```
def download(label_imageIDs, label_dir):
  try:
    os.mkdir(label_dir)
  except FileExistsError:
    print(label_dir + ': path already exists')

  for imageId in label_imageIDs:
    image_file_path = label_dir + imageId + '.jpg'
    if os.path.isfile(image_file_path) == False:
      download_blob(gcloud_project_name,
                    gcloud_train_dir + imageId + '.jpg', image_file_path)
```

We have covered all of the storage tools that will be needed.

Processing Data

According to the competition overview, only the images found in train-images-boxable-with-rotation.csv are able to be used for training. There should be 1,743,042 images in this list.

It looks like there is a lot of metadata in this file. Really we're just interested in the `ImageID`.

Get to Work

Let's grab a list of all of these `ImageIDs`.

In [0]:
```
import os
import csv
import numpy as np

def imageID_generator():
  with open(train_imageid_path) as csvfile:
    reader = csv.DictReader(csvfile)
    for row in reader:
      yield row['ImageID']

imageIDs = list(imageID_generator())
```

In [0]:
```
image_count = 1_743_042
assert len(imageIDs) == image_count, 'there should be the expect number of ima ges available: 1,743,042'
imageIDs[:1000]
```

Let's take a look at the infomation available in the class-descriptions-boxable.csv mapping.

In [0]:
```
class_descriptions_path = base_dir + 'class-descriptions-boxable.csv'
```

In [0]:
```
printFirstRowOfCSV(class_descriptions_path)
```

```
/m/011k07    /m/011q46kg
Tortoise       Container

It looks like this is mapping of readable labels (or classes) to the encoded counterparts.

Let's grab a couple mappings of the classes.

- { Label ID : Readable Label }
- { Readable Label : Label ID }

In [0]:
```
import csv

def class_description_generator():
  with open(class_descriptions_path) as csvfile:
    reader = csv.reader(csvfile)
    for row in reader:
      yield row

labels_idKeyed = {row[0]: row[1] for row in class_description_generator()} labels_nameKeyed = {n:i for i,n in labels_idKeyed.items()}
```

In [0]:
```
def imageID_generator(labelID):
  with open(base_dir + 'train-annotations-bbox.csv') as csvfile:
    reader = csv.DictReader(csvfile)
    for row in reader:
      if (row['LabelName'] == labelID):
        yield row['ImageID']
```

/m/0jbk = Animal

Let's get a list of images that have animals.

In [0]:
```
animal_labelID = labels_nameKeyed['Animal'] print(animal_labelID)
```

```
/m/0jbk
```

In [0]:
```
def animal_imageID_generator():
  return imageID_generator(animal_labelID)

animal_imageIDs = list(set(animal_imageID_generator()))
animal_imageIDs.sort() print(len(animal_imageIDs))
```

```
9396
```

In [0]:
```
animal_imageIDs_len = len(animal_imageIDs)
```

Looks like there are 9,396 unqiue image ids with Animal labels.

We can verify that these image do have animals in them. Let's take ten image ids from the list and copy them to this environment.

In [0]:
```
print a small list of ids

for i, id in enumerate(animal_imageIDs):
  ids_to_verify.append(id)

It appears that all of the animal images have been transferred to the Google Drive.

Finding a set of images that are not animals.

First, let's wrap the work from finding Animal image ids into a function

In [0]:
```
def imageIdsForLabel(label_name):
  def ensureLabelExists():
    label_name_is_keyed_label = label_name in labels_nameKeyed.keys()
    assert label_name_is_keyed_label, '{} label not found.'.format(label_name)

  ensureLabelExists()

  labelID = labels_nameKeyed[label_name]
  print(label_name + ' is label id: ' + labelID)

  imageIDs_matching_label = list(set(imageID_generator(labelID))) # set() ensu res each value is unqiue,
                                                                  # list() ens
ures set will be ordered
  imageIDs_matching_label.sort()

  print(str(len(imageIDs_matching_label)) + ' images found.')
  return imageIDs_matching_label
```

Let's validate this function against our previous animal results

In [0]:
```
tmp_ids = imageIdsForLabel('Animal') assert animal_imageIDs == tmp_ids, 'Something went wrong, function does not wo rk.'
```

```
Animal is label id: /m/0jbk
9396 images found.

Let's what happens if the label doesn't exist

In [0]:
```
imageIdsForLabel('Alien')
```

```
---------------------------------------------------------------------------
AssertionError                            Traceback (most recent call last)

      5

Now, we just need to tune this function to return any label but the 'animal' label

In [0]:
```
import random

def imageIdsThatAreNOTLabel(label_name, count):
  def ensureLabelExists():
    label_name_is_keyed_label = label_name in labels_nameKeyed.keys()
    assert label_name_is_keyed_label, '{} label not found.'.format(label_name)

  ensureLabelExists()

  label_ids = []
  for i in range(count):
    name, label_id = random.choice(list(labels_nameKeyed.items()))
    if (name != label_name):
      print(name)
      label_id.append(label_id)

  imageIDs_matching_label = list(set(imageID_generator(labelID))) # set() ensu
res each value is unqiue,
                                                                  # list() ens
ures set will be ordered
  imageIDs_matching_label.sort()

  print(str(len(imageIDs_matching_label)) + ' images found.')
  return imageIDs_matching_label
```

(I decided to abandon this approach in favor of understanding the labels further).

Find the label distribution of the training set

The folowing three functions will

In [0]:
```
import numpy as np
import matplotlib.pyplot as plt
from matplotlib.ticker import MaxNLocator
from collections import namedtuple

def label_and_imageID_generator():
  with open(base_dir + 'train-annotations-bbox.csv') as csvfile:
    reader = csv.DictReader(csvfile)
    for row in reader:
      yield row['LabelName'], row['ImageID']

def label_to_imageID_mapping():
  mapping = {}
  for label, imageID in label_and_imageID_generator():
    if (label in mapping.keys()):
      mapping[label].append(imageID)
    else:
      mapping[label] = [imageID]
  return mapping
```

Generate

In [0]:
```
label_to_imageID_mapping = label_to_imageID_mapping()
```

Save

In [0]:
```
https://stackoverflow.com/questions/8685809/writing-a-dictionary-to-a-csv-file-with-one-line-for-every-key-value
import csv
with open(base_dir + 'label_to_imageID_mapping.csv', 'w') as csv_file:
  writer = csv.writer(csv_file)
  for key, value in label_to_imageID_mapping.items():
    writer.writerow([key, value])
```

Load

In [0]:
```
https://stackoverflow.com/questions/8685809/writing-a-dictionary-to-a-csv-file-with-one-line-for-every-key-value
import sys
import csv
maxInt = sys.maxsize
decrement = True

label_to_imageID_mapping={}

while decrement:
    # decrease the maxInt value by factor 10
    # as long as the OverflowError occurs.

    decrement = False
    try:
        csv.field_size_limit(maxInt)
    except OverflowError:
        maxInt = int(maxInt/10)
        decrement = True

with open(base_dir + 'label_to_imageID_mapping.csv') as csv_file:
    reader = csv.reader(csv_file)
    label_to_imageID_mapping = dict(reader)

Now, we can plot the label distribution in a bar chart.

In [0]:
```
def plotLabelDistribution(mapping):
  keys = list(mapping.keys())
  keys.sort()

  n_groups = len(mapping.keys())

  count_per_key = [len(mapping[key]) for key in keys]

  fig, ax = plt.subplots()

  index = np.range(n_groups)
  bar_width = 0.35

  opacity = 0.4
  error_config = {'ecolor': '0.3'} rects1 = ax.bar(index, count_per_key, bar_width,

                  alpha=opacity, color='b', label='Labels')

  ax.set_xlabel('Labels')
  ax.set_ylabel('Count')
  ax.set_title('Label Distrubtion among images') ax.set_xticks(index + bar_width / 2)
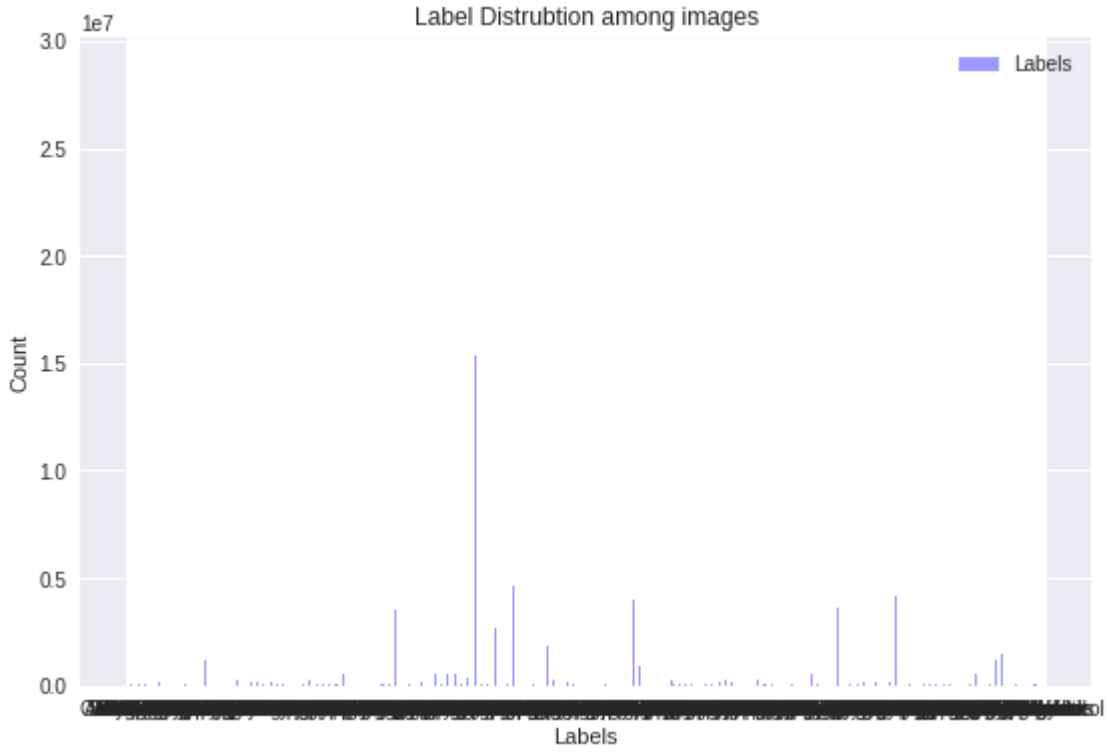
  ax.set_xticklabels([labels_idKeyed[key] for key in keys])
  ax.legend()

  fig.tight_layout()
  plt.show()
```

In [0]:
```
plotLabelDistribution(label_to_imageID_mapping)
```



It appears that there are large spikes in the label distribution. A few labels appear to be in most of the images.

Let's get a look at the raw numbers.

Label Hierarchy

The label distribution showed signs that some labels might share characteristics. Some labels may be more specific versions of others.

In [0]:
```
import json

def readLabelHierarchy():
  with open(base_dir + 'bbox_labels_600_hierarchy.json') as hierarchy:
    dictdump = json.loads(hierarchy.read())
    return dictdump

default_label_hierarchy = readLabelHierarchy()
print(default_label_hierarchy)

This `json` format will be tough to work with in this pyton environment. Let's take a sample of the `json` structure and build a function that can simplify the `json` into a python dictionary.

It looks like some of the other labels codes don't have readable counterparts either.

The label hierachy is not something I am prepared to solve. Therefore, I will simplify the labels further by flattening the hierarchy.

Selecting 13 Top Level Labels

Unfortunately, these first level keys do not seem to have the same level of abstraction. For instance, 'Person' is a first level label, but so are 'Human head', 'Human face', 'Human mouth', 'Human ear' and 'Human nose'.

We'll need to prune this list a bit to get a good distibution of image labels for the initial training runs.

Here are a few that look good:

- Home appliance
- Plumbing fixture
- Office supplies
- Furniture
- Building
- Musical instrument
- Sports equipment
- Tool
- Plant
- Vehicle
- Animal
- Person
- Food

Downloading all of the images for each labels turned out to be very time consuming. For instance, the `Person` label has 248,384 images associated with it.

To continue progress toward training, let's reuse the images already downloaded to fill in for the remaining labels.

In [0]:
```
copyExistingImagesToLabelDirectory('person',
                                   initial_training_dirs,
                                   imageids_for_initial_training_labels,
                                   initial_training_paths)
```
